What's in a NAME

For many of us, the name WO-HE-LO evoked a true kindred spirit to some sacred relationship with our Choctaw Nation friends. We just applied the logic of assumption that our yearbook's name derived from some great saga of Indian folklore. What a surprise to discover that the name had no roots in the Indian language but reflected a close alliance with the culture which permeates the area.

In 1937 when the first yearbook was published, the Indian culture had already impacted the school through its use of mascots and team names-the Warriors. Therefore, to keep the yearbook synchronized with school activities, the sponsor and staff choose the WO-HE-LO acronym to represent the characteristics which reflected to them the focus of school life.

From agricultural college to junior college to community college status, WORK-HEART - LOVE has accurately characterized the functions of the college.

"Herein is contained an account of all important events and phases of college life during the ... year. Its purpose is to preserve this record and to link our future lives with our Alma Mater."

Recording the important events and phases of student life is still the major goal of the yearbook.

EAST CENTRAL JUNIOR COLLEGE
DECATUR

Salute to EXCELLENCE.

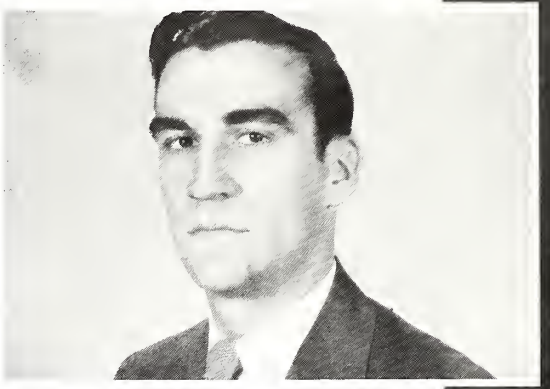
We salute forty years of dedication, devotion, and tireless effort.

On a summer day forty years ago, a young graduate student at Peabody College in Nashville, Tennessee, boarded the greyhound bus to travel to Meridian on the first stop of a journey to the unknown town of Decatur. Ovid Vickers, an English major from the state of Georgia, was met by the President of East Central Junior College, Mr. Arno Vincent, and thus began his only visit to the college campus.



Mr. Vickers recalled that after a morning tour of the campus, he was taken to the President's home for lunch. After lunch, the President announced that he had some work to do, and he offered the young college student a bed for an afternoon nap. "The President returned to work and I took a nap," said Vickers. "Later in the day, he drove me back to Meridian so I could catch the bus back to Nashville." Vickers continued, "I returned to my studies, thinking I would never hear again from this school." But, Ovid Vickers was wrong. By the end of the week, he had an offer and a contract from the college and the rest of the story is a wonderful, colorful history of Work-Heart-Love.

Ovid Vickers' work, heart and love will remain a part of the folklore of the college's life.

The classroom is his love; Mr. Vickers is a master teacher.

Leading the commencement march is the honor of the senior faculty person.

Vickers shines in his element as after-dinner speaker, convention key-noter, and conversationalist.

Fun in the NATIONALS

Hard work brought great success to several groups and students during the '94 spring and summer months. While most students eagerly awaited the spring and summer breaks to pursue their own areas of interest, some students continued to pour their hearts into practices and performances. National honors became possible because of the love and dedication these students gave.

During the spring break, the Lady Warriors' Basketball Team appeared in their first ever National Junior College Basketball Tournament in Tyler, Texas. After losing their first game, the Lady Warriors proved their Work-Heart-Love by capturing the Consolation Championship which ranked them as number 7 in the nation. Rena Reed, a 1994 graduate from Forest, was one of just 10 players in the nation chosen on the NJCAA All Tournament Team.

In June, Scott May, a '94 graduate of Forest, participated for the second year in the National Junior College Athletic Association Golf Tournament in Greensboro, North Carolina. May finished his season in the top 25 golfers.

Not to be outdone, the cheerleaders traveled to Athens, Texas, in July to attend the National Cheerleading Association Collegiate Camp. Hard work paid off for them as they claimed top honors in the fight song competition in the all girls' squad division and claimed the Winners Silver Award in that same category. The group also won the NCA spirit stick as well as four superior ribbons and one excellent ribbon for routines. Sophomore Dawn Sharp was selected as an NCA All-American nominee.

Hours of hard work, tons of heart, and a lot of love carried these students to national levels of achievement.

NCA All-American nominee, Dawn Sharp (center photo) demonstrates the athletic skill which helped her win the opportunity to cheer in the Senior Bowl game in Mobile, Alabama on January 29.

The cheerleaders celebrate their National showing.

The basketball girls were excited and proud about having a chance to play in the National Tournament. The atmosphere in the gymnasium was electrifying. Only the elite were playing and the Lady Warriors were among the elite. "I really didn't realize what we had accomplished to get there until the opening ceremony when all the teams marched in," said Sara Hollingsworth. "We were all out there together on the court, holding our school flags while the National Anthem was played. It was the greatest feeling," continued Hollingsworth. "We were making history for our school."

Lady Warrior Dane Vance recalls the final moments of the last game. "I think we all knew with under a minute to go that the game was over and we would win. On the bench, we were all holding hands and counting the seconds down. It was total elation."

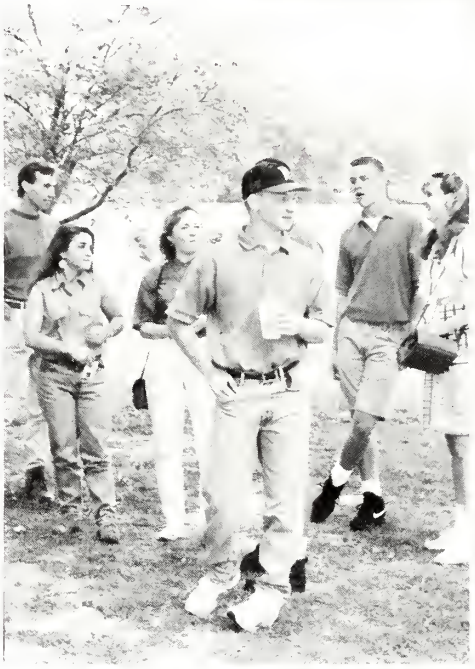
AWARD WINNING GROUP



Theta Xi officers relax at Lake Tiak-O'Khata during a break in one of the many leadership seminars the Chapter conducts for other community college chapters.

The Theta Xi Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa was actively involved in the support and the planning of well-rounded campus activity. The Chapter supported such programs as the tutorial assistance, educational accountability, and special projects like the highway adoption program and mental awareness week. Participation in these projects helped the Chapter receive a Distinguished Chapter Award at the '94 Spring Convention in Anaheim, California. This honor was given to only 25 Chapters in the nation. The recognition was determined by the Chapter's participation in the areas of scholarship, leadership, fellowship, and service.

In addition to the Chapter honor, Dr. Shelby Harris, a chapter advisor, was selected as one of fifteen outstanding advisors in the nation to be named a Giles Distinguished Advisor. Harris joined ranks with his co-advisor, Mrs. Ann Burkes, who had previously received the honor. This double honor is the only one in Mississippi and is one of very few in the nation.

Cindy Callahan, 1994 Phi Theta graduate of Forest, added more honor to the Chapter when she was recognized as one of 10 students in the Nation and 1 of 2 in the state to receive the Guistwhite Scholarship, Phi Theta Kappa's most prestigious honor.

By the middle of the summer break, this Chapter was already planning the next step toward even further advancement.

Spring Spree Fever

The official spring spree shirt, drawn by art major Natalie Nowell, sports a western theme complete with a hopeful victor.

Exams might have been just around the corner, but the students who converged on the football field had only one thought in mind: to lead their squad to the championship. No, this was not intercollegiate sports but the celebration of spring.

Running down the field with a spoon of peas in the mouth was just one of the many exploits performed at the annual Spring Spree. The afternoon exploded with shouts of encouragement and cheers of victory. Perhaps the games were not reminiscent of the Olympic games, but each participator performed like a potential Olympic star.

After the games, the victories were celebrated at the royal gala where students danced the twilight into the evening. The day had been perfect in every way, and now thoughts turned once again to the task which awaited the spring spree warriors- exams.

Student groups prepare to challenge other groups in each of the "spree" events.

Some teams enjoy watching the antics of other teams as they race or crawl for victory.

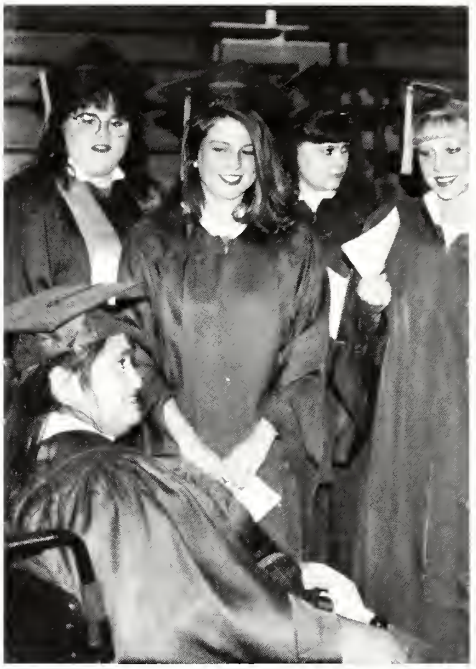
GRADUATION HIGHLIGHTS



1994 graduates eagerly await the walk to the football stadium where their directions will definitely take on new meaning.

May finally arrived with graduation for technical and academic students. The final official activity for the 1994 spring semester drew to the long awaited finale as the graduating sophomores walked onto the football field and across the platform to receive that coveted diploma. The hours of work had brought a fulfilling reward. Graduates departed to find places in the heart of chosen work fields or in higher education.

Students who would return scattered to pursue various areas of interest during the summer. Some of them headed immediately to the local softball and baseball fields. Some returned to jobs awaiting them while others sought fields of pleasure and travel. Yet, many returned to continue or to finish their immediate educational goals during the summer term.

In August, LPN students and surgical technology students completed their diploma programs. As other students prepared to return to the campus, many of these health related students prepared to find that first, long-desired job in the medical field.

The GIANT HOUSEPARTY-EC STYLE

For years, East Central Mississippians have lived for the first week of August and the giant houseparty at the Neshoba County fairgrounds. Many students, faculty, and staff joined the crowds of fairgoers who milled around the fairway, the display arena, and the grandstand. People then crowded onto the porches of the cabins to visit with old friends, relatives, and new acquaintances. Students joyfully gathered with friends whom they had not seen during the summer. For many, the houseparty officially signaled the beginning of the new school semester.

As the excitement of the fair generated around them, the ECCC Cheerleaders, the Centralettes, and the Collegians performed for the spirited audience during the East Central Day activities which are an annual part of the fair. The Collegians enjoyed extra recognition when they were invited to play for the Miss Neshoba County Fair pageant. Young ladies from all over the area shared the dream of reigning over the fair. Several EC students joined in the pageant festivities.

Yet, as the day progressed, people began to find their way to the porches of the cabins which circle the fairway. This was the heart of the fair — not just a giant houseparty but a big homecoming, the southern hospitality way.

The Centralettes capture the crowd's support with one of their dazzling "kick" routines.

During the East Central Day activities, the Collegians entertain the enthusiastic fairgoers.

WELCOME ECC STYLE

As students arrived on campus for the fall semester, the Student Body Association (SBA) began to put into action the plans for the many activities which had been formed for the start of school. The special activities were designed to help students get to know each other as well as to provide fun and entertainment for the students. The most popular of the activities was the appearance of the hypnotist, Col. Wallington, who has mystified students for several years with his power of suggestion and manipulation of student behavior. For days, students talked about the crazy antics they witnessed, providing an intriguing beginning for a new semester.

The hynotist creates havoc among his willing volunteers. Do they think it is raining money?

Clay Fuller grimaces as the technician from the Blood Services prepares to draw blood.

Miski Denmark spends some of her extra hours working in the library.

Whether in the student center enjoying the delight of hamburgers and pizza or on the mall sampling the picnic fare, students always seemed to find activities that involved food. Conversation even flowed easier as students met to discuss daily plans, class assignments, tests, and those even provoking everyday problems: "Just a little bit of 'food' makes the 'medicine' go down." Then fortifying themselves until the next meal, students were off to participate in campus happenings: perhaps gathering on the steps of the East Mall area, enjoying the beauty of the Harrison Memorial Garden, helping out in a worthy cause, seeking out friendly competition, or even going to work for a few hours. Regardless of the activity, the heart of the college revolved around the workings of the students both in and out of class.

The cheerleaders build their ever-popular pyramid, just one of their many high-towering stunts.

One of the hardest working and perhaps least recognized groups on campus was the cheerleaders. The many hours of practice required of them was often overlooked. Yet, this group always gave a hundred percent to have a well-planned pep rally.

Under the direction of Mrs. Kelly Bridgman, the cheerleaders put together an effectively planned weekly spirit rally. Leading the supporters in cheers and building enthusiasm was probably the easiest part of their responsibility. The timing and the steps for the routines and the dances required much more concentration. The cheerleaders shared the spotlight with the band and the Centralettes who performed dance routines for the appreciative audience.

As the cheerleaders worked the crowd for support, they performed various gymnastic and tumbling events. Several of the cheerleaders seemed to be fearless as they climbed to the top of the pyramids or performed other athletic feats.

Students gathered in planned and spontaneous events on campus. This was the heart of the college. Making new acquaintances and establishing lasting friendships were the by-products of campus life. The many activities served as a common ground on which to meet and to learn about other students. Whether in large or small groups, students participated in intramural activities, challenged each other in pool or ping-pong in the student center, or just gathered on the mall or around the dorms to visit. Certain classes will never be remembered and all the bad times will be forgotten, but the life we shared on campus will always keep us close in heart.

Homecoming Day was full of activities from the 5K run in the morning until the evening reception after the ballgame. Alumni, students, faculty, staff, and friends joined in the activities and reunions preceding the football game with Hinds. The freshmen students were introduced to their first Homecoming as the sophomores celebrated their last.

For the alumni, this was truly a coming home to their school. Among the special groups honored were the past Homecoming Queens who were recognized during the half time ceremony.

The Warriors were not victorious this day, but they played with great determination. The stands were filled with supporters who tried to cheer them on to victory.

This was a day of memories and a day to create new memories in the hearts and love of all ECCC folks.

All week students from different organizations worked on signs to demonstrate support for the Warriors. The signs were judged and then taken to the football field and placed in the end zone for everyone to enjoy and for encouragement to the Warriors.

The annual bonfire pep rally pulled everyone together in support of the Warriors. The bonfire leaped into flames as the Warrior Mascot shot a lighted arrow into the mound of wood. The football team was challenged by the delivery of a spray of flowers from "the opposing Eagle team". The excitement of the evening continued into the Homecoming dance as students danced among the bright lights, balloons, and streamers. As the Court was presented, the week began to draw to a close.

Young ladies made last minute preparations for their appearances on stage: a few touch-ups to the hair, a little more color to the cheeks, and the last practice on the proper walk. Then the moment came for the contestants in the first group to make their walk across the stage. As Mr. Vickers announced the names, each contestant was escorted to the center of the stage. As soon as each group completed its final turns for the judges, the girls eagerly filed into the hallway as the other groups prepared to make their ways to the stage. Presented in groups of eleven, the young ladies twirled and promenaded for the judges and the audience. Although the judges had to choose winners, the audience witnessed 22 winners. In the end, the judges' selections were made and another pageant had ended-the culmination of hours of work and love.

CAMPUS HONORS

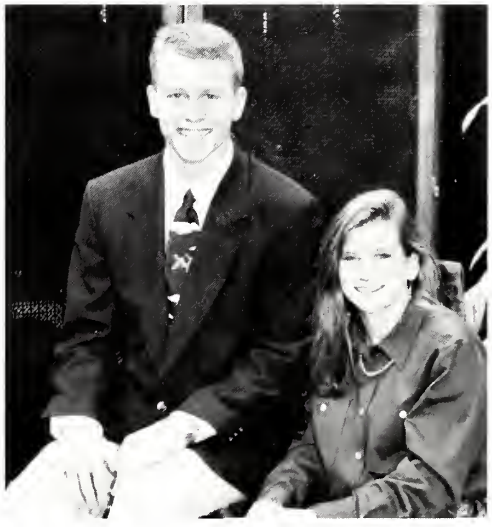
Reward Student Involvement

Representing the ideals exemplified in the student body were Mike Hurst and Ronda Jones. Mike and Ronda both were actively involved in the total college program.

Mike worked diligently in his leadership positions as an organizational officer and as Student Body President. On the basketball court, he put much of his heart into his determination and performance. As a Warrior Corps member, he shared his love of the college with students in the area schools.

Ronda also shared her love of college activities and campus life through her recruitment work as a Warrior Corps member. Serving as a football and a basketball cheerleader, Ronda put in many hours of work in making and painting signs for ball games and in working on routines and tumbling events. Ronda's heart was totally devoted to her support of the athletic program in every possible form.

Mr. and Ms. East Central each applied work, heart, and love to every aspect of their college and personal lives- great examples of campus leadership.



Mike and Rhonda share a relaxing moment.

FAVORITES

The class favorites represented a wide spectrum of college life and activities: sports, drama, art, and journalism. Yet, all of these students had one common thread-they represented the ideals of their fellow students. The diversity of the groups indicated the extent of the personality range of the 1500 plus student body. The favorites included cheerleaders, basketball players, a football player, Warrior Corps members, Homecoming court members, Centralettes, softball players, and an art student.

The spotlight fell on certain students and faculty members as recipients of special awards and honors.

The HEADWAE (Higher Education Appreciation Day- working for Academic Excellence) program honored individual excellence among students and faculty in the state's institutions of higher learning. The HEADWAE student was chosen by the faculty from among a list of students who had compiled a 3.5 GPA. The students who ranked among this number voted on the faculty recipient. The honorees joined with other recipients at a banquet in Jackson, hosted by Governor Kirk Fordice.

Who's Who Among American Community and Junior Colleges recognized the students who ranked in the top three percent of the student body. Selection was based on academic achievements, service to the community, leadership, extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

The Scholar's Bowl rewarded hard work by giving students an opportunity to use their intellectual abilities in competition against other community junior college students. The competi tion was sponsored by the University o Mississippi.

Four faculty members were honore by being named participants to th annual Lamplighter Symposium spon sored by the Mississippi Community and Junior Colleges Academic Deans Assocation. The Symposium provide an opportunity for faculty across th state to come together for fellowship intellectual stimulation, and encour agement.

Leadership Development was a class on campus designed to build self esteem and leadership qualities. This leadership development class was unique in that it was not an open forum class. Instead of one teacher, the class had two instructors who gave the students different viewpoints on certain issues. The class was designed not to give pressure by not having homework except to read and to actively participate in class. Another factor that the students really enjoyed was no tests! The goal of the leadership class was not only to teach leadership skills, but to teach students what to look for in a leader and to teach them to recognize what makes a leader good or bad. The class revolved around debate and critical thinking. This structure gave the students a break from the regular classroom structure since it provided more time for the students to express themselves and to learn more about other students.

The leadership program was sponsored by the Kellogg Corporation through the local campus Phi Theta Kappa organization.

Whether in the classroom or on the basketball court, Coach Sammy Pace approaches his students with professionalism and respect. Coach Pace has been teaching for twenty-three years and coaching basketball for ten years.

Coach Pace was the only coach on campus that taught full academic classes. His classes were enjoyed by the students because they were interesting; they were respected by the students because Coach Pace made the students work for their grades. In his classes, Coach Pace not only lectured but encouraged open and direct discussions among his students.

After teaching Sociology and Marriage and Family, Coach Pace still managed to carry a girls basketball team to state, regional and national titles. Although it is not a common sight to see a coach teach so many classes, EC has been lucky to have coaches with the genuine desire to convey knowledge to students. Coach Sammy Pace is just one example of that desire to see students achieve academically.

The math and science division experienced growth in student numbers, faculty, and course offerings.

With the continued increase in student enrollment, the math and science classes were too full, so a new instructor was hired in each area to help with the overload. This kept the biology labs down to at least 40 per lab. With fewer students in the labs, instructors were able to do some practical application instruction. Dr. Key's challenge to his students was for them to discover a way to solve the fire ant problem on campus.

Two instructors from the division became involved with the new Tech-Prep initiative, which will have long-range effects on each area. These instructors offered suggestions for the matriculation concepts involved from the high school to the community college. Another instructor taught a college algebra class by E.T.V. while another offered weekend biology classes, giving students alternatives to the regular day and night class options. A new math class was taught for students who scored a 24 or above in math on the ACT and who had had 4 years of high school math. This class involved the use of computerized instruction which presented a new and interesting challenge. The information highway continued to advance.

"Everything that I do for the ADN program is based on prayer," stated Mrs. Nancy Harris when asked about the new nursing program. She stated that she had been awe struck with the responsibility for such a job, but that she had taken one day at a time. According to Mrs. Harris, the program had a great start, resulting in a larger academic enrollment than expected. Although over seventy qualified people had applied for admission, only thirty-four students were accepted into the program. Mrs. Harris stated that this would remain the average number of students accepted due to the size of facilities and the number of clinical sites in the area. The first ever ADN class included (pictured below first row L to R): Nurse Brenda Kirby, Skills Lab instructor; Tammy Martin, Tammy Sanders, Joyce Ellis, Jennifer Collins, Lee Chamblee, Michelle Merchant, Edith Vowell, Clotee Harper, Dr. Barbara House; (second row): Sherri Ferguson, Melissa Rowzee, Angela Shaw, Charles Coleman, Vertis Williams, Suzanne Brown, Kelly Miller, Lorrie Stamper; (third row): Kim Spillman, Jeff Vance, Anita Harris, Lisa Addy, Mistie Arthur, Patricia Fountain, Wendy Phillips, Denita Thomas; (fourth row): Gloria Rigdon, Mrs. Patricia Riley-Long, Debbie Rigdon, Debbie Wilcher, Tommy Farley, Joey Martin, Michael Johnston, Robby Brady, and Alan Squires.

Technological advancement came once again to the campus as the Work-Based learning program developed. This program combined classroom instruction and on-the-job training to offer students a clearer connection between the areas of school and work. Along with the Tech-Prep initiative which emphasized practical applications of all skills, vo-tech students gained the opportunity to know and to learn more about the job market which awaited them. The vo-tech programs offered services to students and college personnel as they trained students in specific trades and job market skills.

Increased attention to the technical and the business-industry world brought many new faces to the campus as the college began to put into action the new programs established by legislative designation. With these programs, the college planned to build a one-stop career center which will provide career planning and development for the five counties in the district. This center will give students an even closer connection to the job market of the area as well as provide business and industry much needed help in work relations. A total package will then be offered to the job market as the vo-tech program prepares new members for the job force and retrains or improves the efficiency of those already in the work market.

One of the most valuable sites on campus was the Day Care Center where the child care students learned to apply their textbook knowledge in a lab situation. The center also provided a much needed service to student mothers who wanted to return to school and also to women who worked on campus and had small children who needed a day care facility. Freshman Rhonda Landers, whose two year old son, James A. Houston, Jr., attended the child care program, stated, "The ECCC child care program has been beneficial to me and to my son, for it is convenient to have him closer to where I am. And, as for him, he has a lot of fun." Not only did the child care provide for the students, but it provided a need in all students by offering them the opportunity to occasionally mingle with the children on campus. The day care children always challenged the students at the pep rallies to see who could yell the loudest. The children were loyal Warrior fans. On rainy days when the children needed exercise, they often joined the college students in the student activity gym. Some of those little ones could dribble as well as some of the older students. The children added a special touch to the campus.

Leaders work to Organize the Activities

The dances were just some of the special activities planned and directed by the student leaders. The Student Body Association officers and the class officers worked to provide interesting activities and special events for the campus. They worked in concert to solicit as much student participation as possible in campus-wide activities. The most popular events were the annual hypnotist show in the fall and the annual spring spree. Students eagerly participated in the antics of these events.

The campus officers not only provided leadership for campus events but also provided leadership for other students. The SBA represented students in the areas of campus government. The class officers led students in matters of policy and in social behaviors. Their elections to these offices demonstrated the influence these officers shared in their leadership skills.

Students Lead Campus Events

Elections for campus leaders gave students a voice in planning the course of student sponsored activities. The campaigning and voting process involved in the elections provided practice in the democratic method.

Represent the Campus

Representation was an important word to students, and just as the elected Student Government Officers served to represent the students, so did students in other areas of campus life. For instance, the women's dorms chose from among their peers those who would help regulate any minor problem or infraction to keep dorm life running as smoothly as possible. The President's Council, composed of the presidents elected by each campus organization, met monthly with Dr. Smith and Dean Brown to discuss future organizational events. These meetings provided continuity to campus activities. Representation was also a key word for the Warrior Corps. This group of students was compiled through a highly structured selection process. They served as REPRESENTATIVES of the school at official functions and on recruitment visits.

Students Meet to

Foster an Awareness

The SADD organization worked to keep students alert to the dangers associated with drinking and driving. Special emphases throughout the year-red ribbons, guest speakers, T-shirts, etc.-served as constant reminders of behavior modifications.

The Native American Organization and New Directions created associations which provided encouragement and support for these special interest groups. Members shared their accomplishments and their disappointments with each other and helped each other adapt to the regiment of college life.

Focus on Trades

These organizations encouraged members to become not only excellent workers but also concerned members of society. The students were asked to look beyond themselves to the need which existed around them. During the holidays, they sponsored canned food drives for food distribution to those less fortunate. One group sold chances to raise money to provide toys and clothes for children who might otherwise go without. These students learned to incorporate various meanings of the word service.

Attain More Knowledge

Students who excelled in or who had special interest in specific course areas had the option to join the organizations related to those areas. These organizations sponsored leadership building skills and knowledge acquisition. Phi Beta Lambda members demonstrated leadership skills as they conducted fundraisers to help cover expenses to the state meetings where many of the students competed in group and individual business procedure contests. Mu Alpha Theta members met the challenge of problem solving while Sigma Sigma Mu Tau members enjoyed field trips to the medical centers and the science museum.

Gain an Insight

Academic honorees, student engineers, and education majors discovered many opportunities to enlarge upon their areas of training. Each group often experienced guest lecturers who challenged them to greater achievement and commitment in their college work as well as future endeavors. Alpha Alpha Epsilon engineer students met with local engineers who helped them understand the various areas of the engineering field. Student educators gained insight from the experience of area educators. Phi Theta Kappa members participated in various leadership clinics for local, state, and regional student leaders.

Improve on Values

Three campus organizations provided spiritual and religious guidance for students according to their individual needs. Although sponsored by specific religious bodies, these organizations welcomed any student who chose to be a part of their functions. The Black Student Fellowship operated as a separate entity under the umbrella of the Baptist Student Union; yet, this group was also a part of the larger group. The Newman Club and the Wesley Foundation, even though sponsored by the Catholic Society and the Methodist Church respectively, also included any interested students. The purpose of these groups was to extend a Christian welcome to all while providing activities, Bible study, and fellowship for students who were affiliated with them.

Learn the Ropes

Either writing a news story, modeling a new fashion, or operating the lights for a play production, the members of these organizations were constantly involved in production. The Tom-Tom paper staff had deadlines to meet to get the paper to press. The modeling squad participated in high school and community club programs, demonstrating not only the fashions but their skills. The players scurried about, getting props, furniture, etc. for the next production or working backstage, doing all those necessary jobs of prop, make-up, and stage-hands. By the year's end, these groups had learned the ROPES for a successful production.

Two Thumbs Up for Dinner Theater

The play "Steel Magnolias" occurs completely in Truvy's beauty salon where all the important women in town gather not only to lend themselves to Truvy's miracles, but to also lend themselves to each other's needs and support. Applause for a

Superb Drama Production

Three nights totally sold out within four hours after the box office opened. Many legitimate theaters would love to claim that same problem. However, the problem was Judy Harrison's, the Director of the dinner theater production of the very popular "Steel Magnolias". A funny but very touching and sad play, "Steel Magnolias" has thrilled movie and theater audiences. Now the ECCC family has joined that fortunate number. After a delicious meal, the dinner theater audiences focused all attention on the stage as the conflict in the play rises to its inevitable conclusion, even in the midst of humor and laughter.

Entertainment Excellence

The hit musical "Annie" was presented as the annual spring musical show. The play revolves around the ever lovable orphan Annie. Deserted in a hard knock orphanage run by the less than kindly Miss Hannigan, Annie escapes to an easier life outside where tomorrow is always brighter because of hope and because of a stray dog named Sandy. When Annie is returned to the orphanage, she is separated from her new pal Sandy. However, Annie escapes once again, but this time on the arm of a billionaire's secretary. Daddy Warbucks wants to entertain an orphan at Christmas. The holiday and the musical unfold in a whirl of adventure as Annie charms Warbucks, F.D.R., the U.S. Cabinet, and the entire country.

Compete in FUN

Sounds of victory and moans of defeat erupted through the halls of the student activity center as the members of the three-on-three basketball teams played to elminate each other. Spirited players taunted each other as they made that fast break for the goal. On the football field, flags waved in the breeze as players on the flag football teams mounted a defense to stop the other team. Players sprinted the field, looking for that goal line rush. Intramural games encouraged team work and friendly competition among the students and the faculty who gave one hundred per cent effort and heart to the intramural program.

Sing a Song

Music comes from the soul and finds its expression in many forms. For those who desired an outlet for gospel music, the Gospel Choir performed gospel or soul gospel for churches and for community events. For students who enjoyed the range of different types of music, the Concert Choir presented various kinds of music from classical to folk. For a few students who enjoyed a more showcase type of music, the Ac'cents, a small ensemble, performed show tunes and popular tunes of the 40's, 50's and 60's.

Students Blend to Create the Right Beat

Music variety continued into a choice of instrumental groups. The Concert and the Jazz bands gave students an opportunity to perform in different areas of musical requirements, culminating in the spring concert.

The ever popular Collegians took center stage in the performance category. Their shows were always full of excitement and electrifying sounds.

The Round Mid-Night blues band performed during the half-times of the home basketball games. This small group thrilled the students and other fans with a variety of vocal and instrumental sounds.

Musically Speaking

Never Too Many

The Marching Band, led by director Tom Carson, had 103 members from all five district counties. A survey of some of the band members revealed two major reasons as to why students chose to be a part of the band. The main reason was the scholarship that each member received. This scholarship covered the cost of tuition for the band students. Another reason related to the enjoyment the members experienced in their high school bands. This experience led them to expand their band careers. A few of the band students were music majors. Maybe one day one of them will direct the marching band.

Entertain the Crowd

Led by Drum Major Brande Crenshaw, the Warrior Band had a very successful marching season. After the football season, the campus was soon filled with the sounds of Christmas music as the band marched through the streets of the campus, preparing for Christmas parades. The band enjoyed the opportunity to march in several parades throughout the district.

Dr. Smith coordinated and Directed the Changes in Campus Growth with the Mission of the College

With the rapid expansion of buildings, programs, and technology concepts, it was necessary for Dr. Smith to work many long hours studying the details and concepts of each individual program to determine how effective a program might be for the progress and the welfare of the college.

Our President also had to juggle a demanding schedule. With many state, regional, and national organizations claiming part of his time, Dr. Smith still had many hours to devote to the administration and to the operation of the college plant.

> No one exemplified work, heart, and love any more than our President, Dr. Eddie Smith.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith were always a visible part of any activity which involved student groups on campus: concerts, athletic events, drama productions, art shows, etc. Dr. Smith encouraged students to achieve excellence and to go the extra mile in work, heart, and love, and in all that they set out to accomplish.

Working to keep the organizational order

Chris Brown, Dean of Students' secretary, prepares to take that ever dreaded I. D. picture; They just never look good!

"The highest of distinctions is service to others"

Necessary for every business or organization is the support staff which often goes unrecognized. Support staff members worked behind the scenes doing those tasks which actually run an organization. The people involved in support did the record keeping, the research, the typing, the duplicating, the ordering, and the care taking- all the tasks which others needed done for them.

A survey of 355 students in the composition and the literature classes revealed that the students on campus had a common goal-completion of their educational programs within the required time limit.

Some students enrolled in one year technical or vocational programs while others pursued the associate degree program, both technical and academic. The survey indicated that students complete their collegiate goals within the required time frame.

The survey did not include the ADN, LPN, surgical-tech or other programs where the students had already completed the required core curriculum.

STUDENTS SEE NEED FOR JOBS

Hectic Work Load ?

Do you work and go to school ? 132 out of 355 said yes. 223 were full time students

Increasingly, more and more students joined the work force to help supplement the cost of college education. Students came to register for classes with special requests on time schedules: classes either all on T/Th and out by noon or all classes on MWF and out by 11:00 a.m.

Students also began to request classes split between day and evening schedules. These requests put a strain on advisors as they worked to juggle schedules as best as possible.

However, many students realized that the combination of job and school might mean extra semesters. Nevertheless, many students believed that their working was the only way that they could come to school.

Matthew Howell professes his undying love for Christie Butts-at least in music.

PREPARATIONS FOR FUTURE STUDY

Termination After Two Years ?

Are you enrolled in a two year program or a four year degree program ?

two year 132
four year 214

The Community College has become the place for many students to receive the first two years of a baccalaureate program. The change in demographics, college expenses, and community college mission have made the two-year program the best for many college bound persons.

Some students came to the campus seeking direction for future study. Some came for the purpose of attaining an associate or certificate degree in a particular program.

Some students used the two years to build that confidence needed to feel secure on the larger, more impersonal campuses. Whatever the reason for making the community college choice, students felt a sense of belonging - a part of a family group which would adequately prepare them for a safe move into a larger campus setting.

During the summer months, students began planning and packing for the move to the campus. Excitement filled them as they thought of moving out of home and into the dormitories. A certain phase of life had passed. The students now believed themselves to be on their own. How convenient, though, to go home for just a few minutes. Since most students lived within a 60 mile radius, a quick trip home became the norm and not the exception. At first, the return home was to retrieve some forgotten article. Later, the trip home was to eat a "mom" cooked meal. Finally, the trip home was just to go home for no apparent reason. Soon, students were spending as much or more time at home as on campus.

As photos in this book indicate, students often found their way to sources of food. Food availability, whether on campus or in town, was no problem. Students could have vegetables, hamburgers, or pizza, depending on the food tastes. Commuter students ate the majority of their meals in the student grill. Many dorm students ate one meal a day in the grill. In the survey, the commuter students rated the food in the student center as being fairly good.

NIGHT CLASSES BECOME MORE POPULAR

Are You Busy Tonight ?

Have you taken any night classes to finish graduation requirements ?

yes 55

no 291

Evening classes were always popular with full time employed people. Day students began to realize that taking a night class could free up extra day hours for part-time jobs, and many students began to take that option.

Night classes became a hodge-podge of ages as the more traditional students now mixed with the non-traditional night school student.

In the same respect, day classes filled with many more non-traditional students who joined the part time ranks or who now came to school full time. There was no distinct difference between the night and day classes.

Most students came to campus with the choice of academic pursuit already decided. Most students knew if there was a technical program which directed their interest more than the thoughts of pursuing a bachelor's degree program.

However, some technical students did make the decision to move into a four year program. At the same time, some bachelor degree bound students made the decision that they needed to be involved in an associate degree program or a certificate program.

Changes in family relationships, work force responsibilities, and personal goals brought about changes in educational pursuits.

STUDENTS VIEW CC AS A BEGINNING

Preparing for a Bachelor's Degree ?

What were your reasons for coming to a community college ?
cost 114
2 year degree 56
gradual access to 4 year program 163

Although cost comparisons between the CC and the first two years in the senior college were an important factor, preparation toward a degree still ranked as the top reason for making the community college choice.

Students selected to attend the CC because of the gradual access provided into the degree program. Students viewed matriculation as an easier process when they were more prepared or assured about the college program.

Since most degree programs involved a standard core curriculum, students felt more at ease and less intimidated by beginning that work at the community college.

Victor Parker, Brent Gregory, Chancey Branning, Ryan Buteaux, Avery Nobles and Eric Adcock express many mixed emotions after their win: excitement, amazement, seriousness.

On entering any classroom, one heard the inevitable question, "Have you studied for this test ?" Usually, the answer was "No, I didn't have time!"

As busy as some students may have been, the only problem was "taking" the time not "finding" the time.

Competition from extracurricular activities often caused students much deliberation as they made the decision "to study" or "not to study." From our survey, results indicated that more students spent time on studies than they were willing to openly admit. We should congratulate ourselves, we have learned how to balance activities and study times.

no 112

Early in each semester students made a decision: to cut class or not to cut class. Some students never missed class. Others did not miss except for illness. A few students took advantage of every class cut, and an even smaller number abused the absentee policy.

Students found themselves taking advantage of the cuts because of the difficulty in getting up (or going to sleep), because of the brilliant sunshine, because of the harsh cold, and because of personal problems.

Regardless of the reason, the majority of students knew where to draw the line.

STUDENTS ENJOY THE DATING GAME

Are Wedding Bells Ringing ?

Have you become engaged or married since enrolling at EC ?

yes 42

no 310

Surprisingly, students did not beat a path to the altar. Even though many married couples were found in classes, single students did not follow that lead while at EC.

Many couples formed over the semesters. A low number of students actually became engaged or were married during the semesters they were enrolled. However, most students enjoyed the dating game and seemed content to let thoughts of marriage wait for another time. Nevertheless, the idea of impending marriage weighed heavily upon student minds as evidenced by the enormous popularity of the marriage and family class.

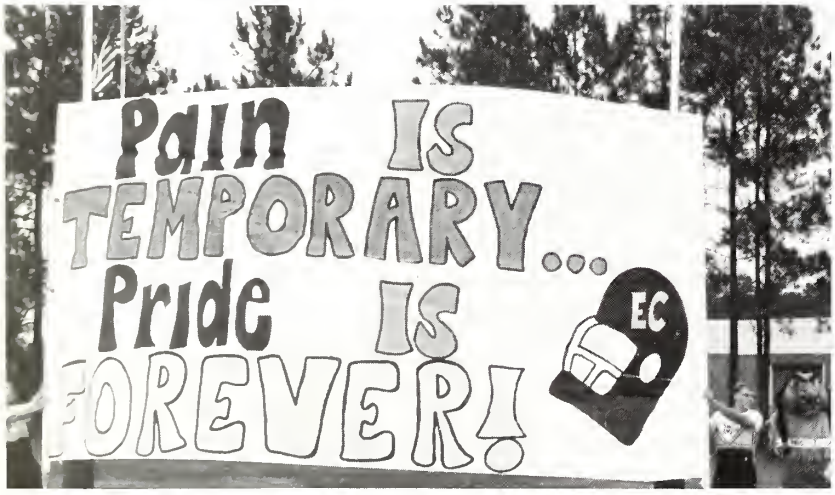
Warriors Make Individual Gains

"Hey man, it's my football," taunts Chris Banks.

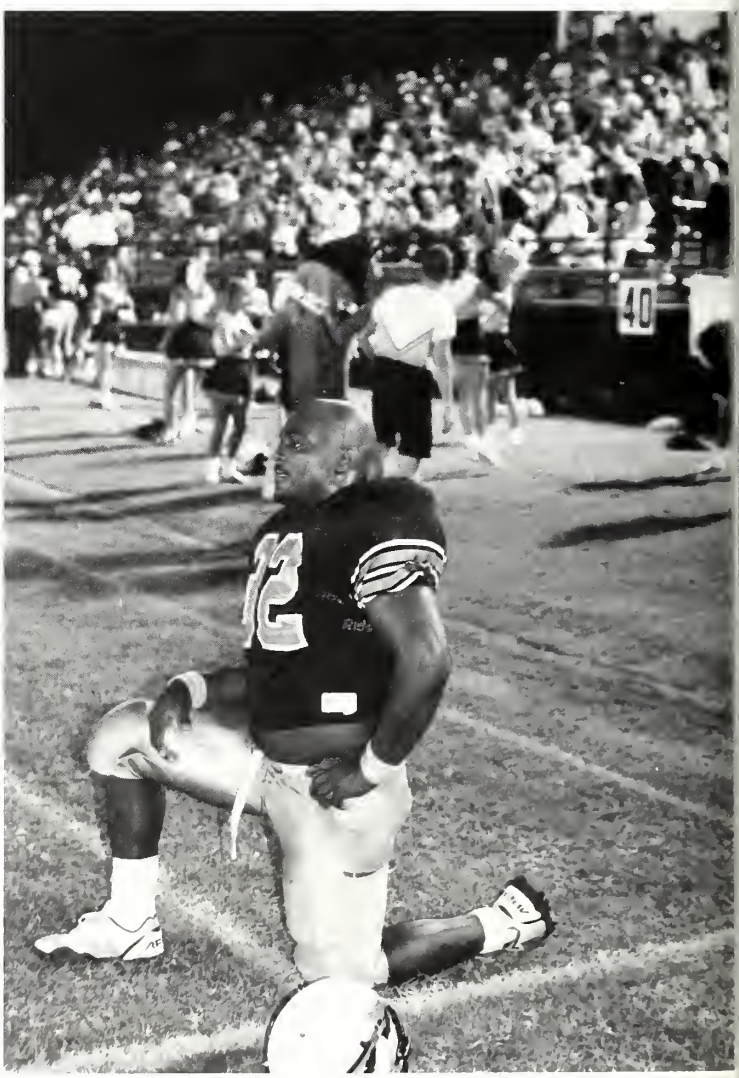
QB Bobby Breen makes a narrow escape as he picks up yardage down the sideline.



The spirit sign offers a word of truth to the Warriors.

"Catch me, If you can," Derrell Reed shouts as he dances through the defensive team.

James McGee gets a fresh prospective on the game plan.



Scrambling around the opposition, Jamie Day protects the football as he pushes to gain yardage.

Always Striving

Pushing for the Goal

The season's outcome was not the record for which the football team and the coaching personnel had hoped. Many individual achievements were made on the field, but the game winning march just did not materialize. Yet, the Warriors never let defeat demoralize them; they faced each game with the same determination of victory.

For the Warriors, pain — the pain of loss — was a constant stalker. However, the team learned that "pain is temporary". They also learned that "pride is forever" and that they should have pride in their abilities and pride in their hard fought efforts. When a team gives a hundred percent and does not give up in the face of great disappointment, that team realizes a greater victory.

Christy Madison escapes the clutches of one opponent as she tries to pass off the ball.

Jennifer Alexander passes the ball down the court to get the team in scoring position.

Chasity Bounds keeps her target from making the attempted two points.

LaDonna Robinson pulls the members of the opposition away from the goal.

Lady Warriors-Once Again

With the taste of victory, this experienced team set out to improve on its previous record. Led by coach Sammy Pace and assistant coach Angela Cockerham, the Lady Warriros finished the regular season with an 18-5 record. The Lady Warrior team ranked third in the division heading into the South State Tournament. They each had high hopes for and the talent for a return to the Regional tournament. While on their quest, the women provided the spectators with some excellent ball handling and with a command of the game.

In the South State Tournament, the Lady Warrior team electrified fans with impressive wins over co-Lin, who had defeated EC in two regular season games, and over arch-rival Pearl River, to take the South State crown.

CHAMPIONS

Enjoying the taste of victory, the Lady Warriors swept the first game of the State Tournament against Northeast, but were denied the overall titile in a close battle with Northwest. The return to the Region 23 Tournament was clenched. However, this was not to be the repeat year for the Lady Warriors. The Lady Warrior team finished the year at 22-7, no small feat in itself!

Interesting Moves- A Winning Combination

The Lady Warriors burst into the season with great enthusiasm and high hopes for another successful year. With each exciting game they gained more confidence and tenacity as they eagerly went after each opponent. By mid-season, they ranked #10 in the nation among community and junior colleges.

Members of the 1994-1995 East Central Community College men's basketball team include (seated from left) student assistant Terry Towner, O.J. McNichols, Philip Prince, Bobby Viverette, Johnny Mays, Darvis Rasberry, Jamie Suttles, student assistant Ja Nance and (standing from left) assistant coach Jennifer Cooper, Vincent Spencer, Juan Allen, Chris Hillie, Stewart Glass, Alphonzo Norman, Mike Hurst, Eric Caples and Coach Marty Cooper

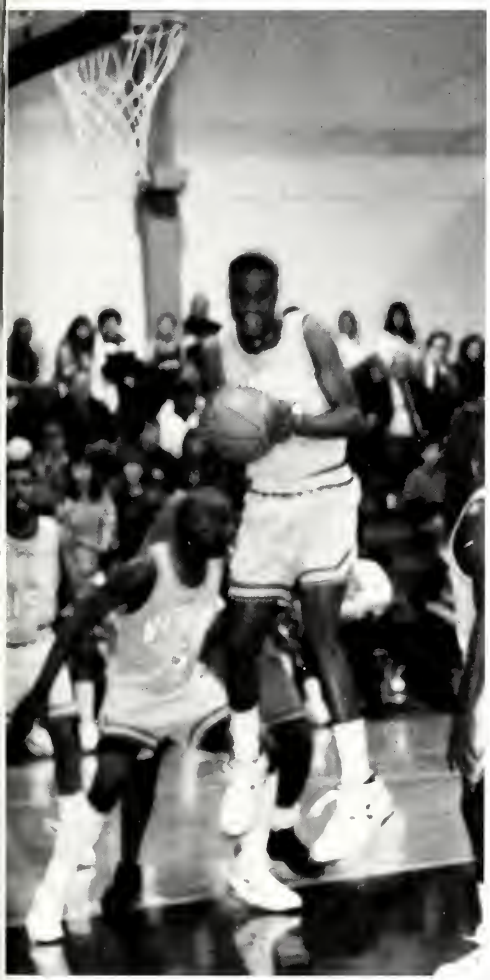
Darvis Rasberry stretches to clock his opponent's shot.

Mike Hurst stays with his man and keeps him away from the ball.



Vincent Spencer hangs suspended as he completely controls the rebound.

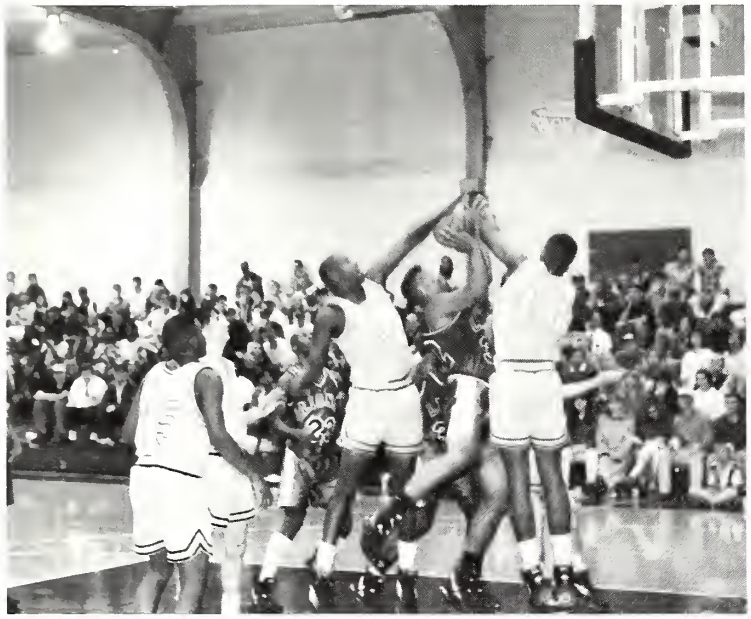
Team hustles For Win

The record did not show the same stats as the previous two years, but the team reflected the same dimension of excellent coaching. Plagued by personnel problems from the start of the year with the loss of three starters after the Christmas break, this basically inexperienced team turned to its sophomores to provide the leadership needed to pull them together. And, the sophomores came through in grand style. The energy, the determination, the fast break, the super three pointer, and the slam dunk combined to give supporters an excellent night at the ball game. This team did not give up. Each game demonstrated greater confidence, greater dimensions, and improved records.

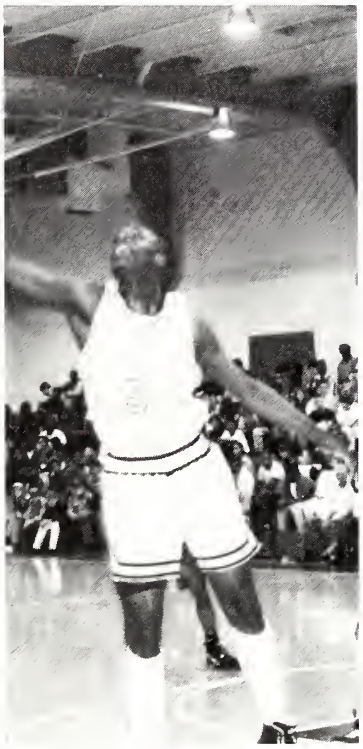
Determination proved to be the winning factor

Bobby Viverette clears the board to set up the next shot.

Talk about the "Hillie smash!" Chris and Milton Hillie freeze the opponent's shot with O.J. McNichols and Philip Prince as backups.



Mike Hurst scores two as he goes under the board for a lay-up.



Johnny Mays puts the rush on the shooter as he reaches in to block the opponent's shot.

O.J. McNichols caries the ball across court to set up the play.

Season's Defensive Moves in Review

The team may have been young and inexperienced, but they knew how to dazzle a crowd and stun their opponents with their athletic prowess. These men could jump and stretch beyond expectations. As they cleared the boards or went up against an opponent one-to-one, they often towered over the opponents.

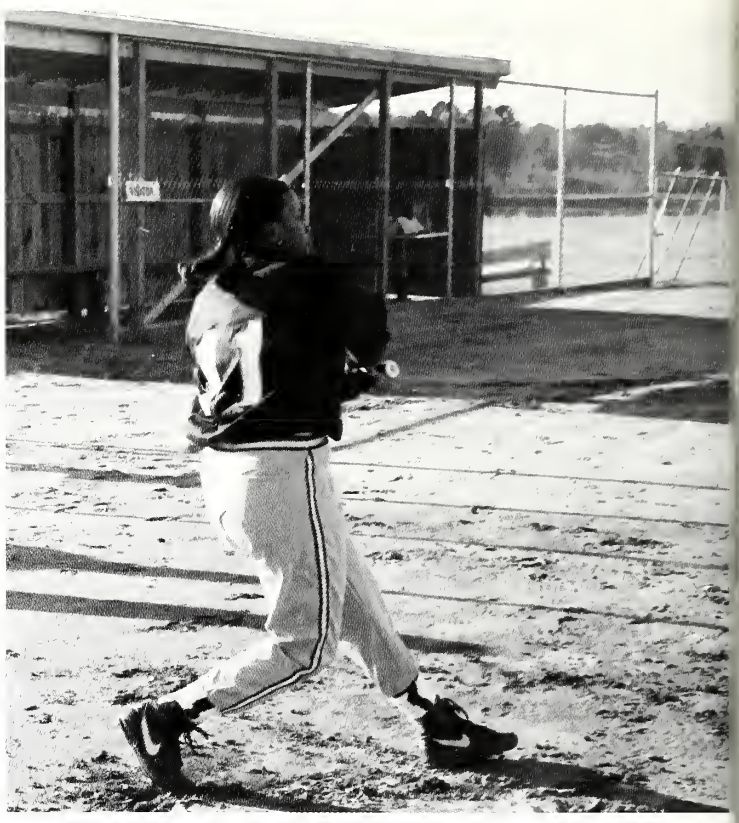
Milton Hillie shoots for two as players scurry to cover the boards.

Juan Allen dares the opponent to pass the ball over his 6'5" stretch.

Vincent Spencer reaches in to force the player to move the ball.

Coach Marty Cooper instructs his players on the game plan needed for the next play.

Keisha, freshman, demonstrates a knowledge of proper follow-through with head and body as she keeps her eye on the ball as it flies through the air.



Warrior Softball Team

Demanding Respect

The Warrior softball team played its first year as a member of the North Division Community College league. This spring, the softball team moved into the stronger southern division.

With the start of the season, coach Clark and his players displayed a positive attitude about the team's chances in the season based on the past year's record and on the number of returning team members.

The first year softball team finished the '94 season as North Division Champs, third in the State, and fourth in the Region-not a bad record for a novice team.

Five starters returned to the softball team to give direction and leadership. The new team members added strength and depth to balance out the still young team.

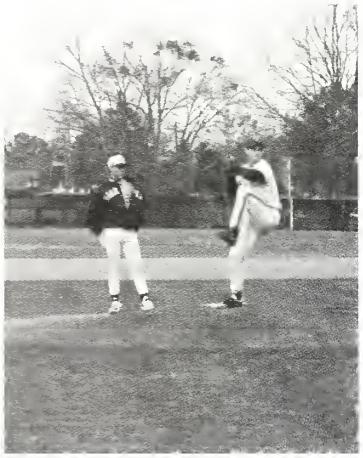
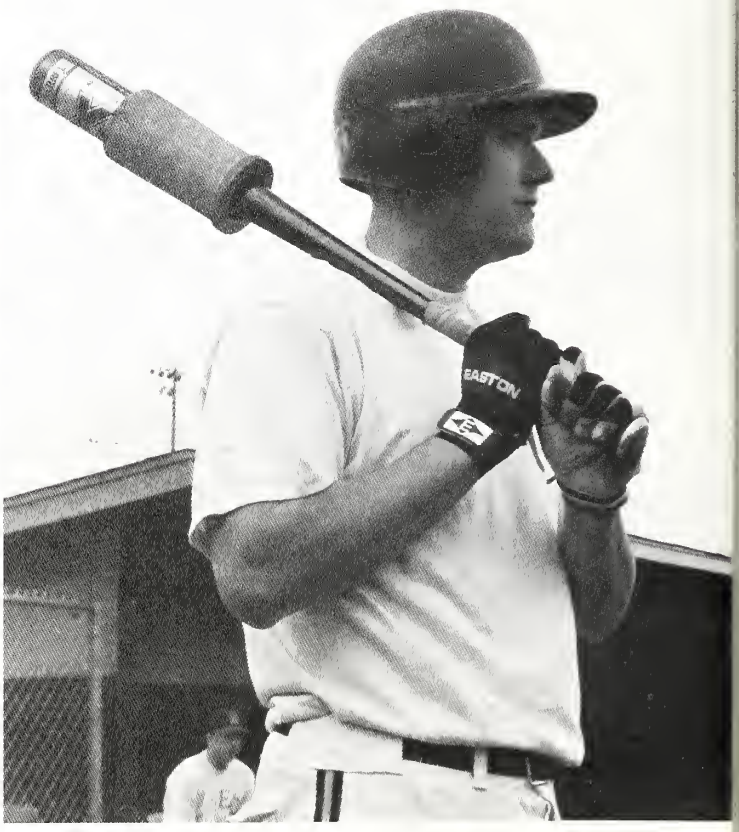
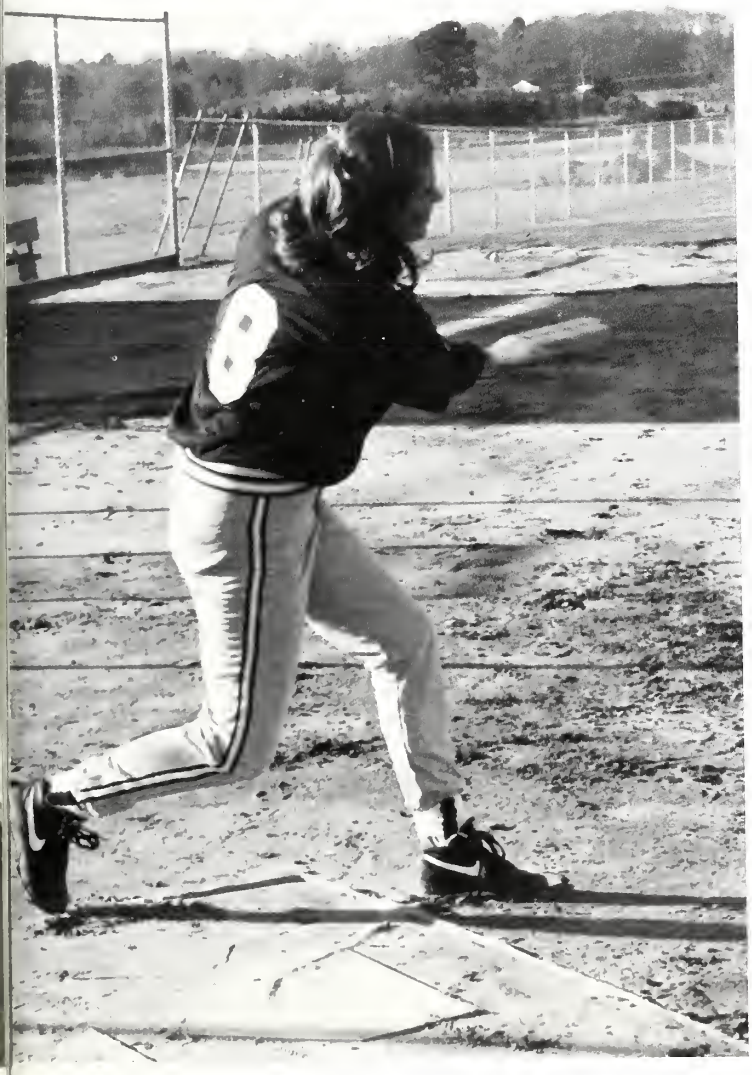
Meeting the Challenge on the Field





Say Coach Clark, are you discussing the arch of a pitch or the height of a player?



Teams gain respect

Hiding in the shadows of football, basketball, baseball, and now softball, the golf and tennis teams had to struggle for student support and respect. However, more and more high schools in the district began to promote tennis and even some golf. Instead of the possibility of only two golfers and maybe three or four tennis players, the teams have experienced growth over the past few years. Again each team experienced growth in interest. The golf team was able for the first time to practice from a driving range on the campus. The newly constructed driving range made it possible for the golfers to get in some good practice on swings and driving distance without "driving any distance." The presence of practicing golfers on the campus helped to increase other student interest in the program.

> "Our numbers in both golf and tennis continue to improve."

TENNIS TEAM: (back) Dave Moorehead, (front) Kris Rigdon, Ty Nowell, Brian Parkes

Students signed as athletic assistants because they enjoyed the excitement of the sport and they enjoyed the travel with the teams. Eventually some of them realized that they loved the work and loved it enough to major in physical therapy or athletic training. During the time spent with the teams, these trainers and managers not only learned from their experiences but provided valuable help and support to the coaches and the team members.

Team Morale Builders

Several groups worked hard to give assistance and morale to the athletic teams. Even though they were often in the lime light, the cheerleaders provided a constant reminder to the teams that supporters were behind them.

The trainers were there to give that physical encouragement when a player suffered an injury or needed a tape job. Managers helped with equipment and kept the "gator aide" pouring. These support groups added a spark to the teams.

WO-HE-LO

Work, Heart, Love

The yearbook staff had a long busy year filled with meeting deadlines. We wanted to show everyone the real meaning behind the name of the yearbook. We have done that, and we have shown how the campus centered on the concepts of work, heart, and love. During our year we also witnessed these concepts at work in the world around us.

Most all of our year was consumed with the Simpson trial and the WORK of the prosecution and the defense. After the floods in Japan, our hearts went out to the people who managed to overcome the devastation of the disasters. We passionately poured out our love for two innocent little boys who met their untimely deaths in such a cruel manner. Yet, our world was much smaller and much calmer, and that is what we have tried to depict. Even though our world was touched by the larger world around us, our actual environment took in very little, and today our desire has been no different than that of the staff of the first WO-HE-LO. We hope our outcome has been just like that desired by the 1937 staff:

"Perhaps we have exaggerated it; perhaps we have underestimated it ... That is for you to judge. We shall always cherish it because of our memories of `ECCC'. Just as we have her ... an institution of WORK-HEART-LOVE."
